

Newborn Hat, the Second

By MakerKnit.com

I made this hat for my daughter when I was pregnant with her. Like the first newborn hat I designed, this hat is just a simple Stockinette stitch hat with rolled brim, but I recalculated the pattern for the DK-weight yarn I chose (my original pattern used worsted weight yarn). I named it “Newborn Hat, the Second” because it is my second newborn hat design and because it is for my second daughter.

I love a rolled brim for a child’s hat because it’s so practical—it can be rolled up or unrolled as much as necessary to fit the child’s head. I am also particularly partial to using beautiful, hand-dyed superwash merino wool. Malabrigo’s Arroyo is especially scrumptious, both in its variation of hues and its softness. And because it is superwash wool, it’s machine-washable, which is something every new parent will appreciate.
